Tift Regional Health System (TRHS) is a growing network of care serving South Central Georgia. TRHS comprises Tift Regional Medical Center (TRMC), our flagship hospital, as well as the TRMC West Campus, Cook Medical Center, Cook Senior Living Center and 24 hospital-owned physician practices. Whether it’s primary care or a specialty service, we have you covered.

To expand access and meet future needs, TRHS recently opened a brand new Musculoskeletal Center at our West Campus. TRHS also implemented a new electronic health record system, powered by Cerner, and will soon break ground on a new emergency center and patient tower at TRMC.

TRHS is currently undergoing corporate restructuring which will allow the system to expand its footprint in the region. TRHS will soon be unveiling a new mobile health unit, which will help providers better reach underserved areas. And, TRHS will be opening a replacement facility for Cook Medical Center and Cook Senior Living in 2019.

TRHS plays a major role in the social and economic vitality of our community. With our growth comes a focus on integration and coordinated care. The ultimate goal is to reduce fragmentation in healthcare and enhance clinical outcomes.
